

The screenshot shows a web browser window with the address bar containing http://www.coolhunting.com/archives/2005/11/liberty\_boots.php. The page title is "Cool Hunting: Liberty Boots". The main content area features a large image of a woman in red and white underwear, with a "Sponsor: American Apparel" tag. Below this is the article title "Liberty Boots" and a photograph of a brown cowboy boot with a skull pattern. The article text reads: "I really had no expectation that this weekend's trip to Dallas, TX would include finding something to post to the site. I stumbled on a store in the West Village called Cowboy Cool filled with all sorts of rocker cowboy gear. These $2250 skull boots caught my attention (obviously). Handmade by Canada's Liberty Boot Company, they're apparently the brand of choice by celebrities galore. Who knew? With their edgy designs and impeccable craftsmanship, it's no wonder." The article is attributed to "by Josh Rubin" and dated "14 November 05". The right sidebar contains a search bar, a newsletter sign-up, a "COOL HUNTING 2005 holiday gift guide" banner, and a list of categories: ART, DESIGN, DEVICES, FOOD, FUTURE, MOBILITY, MUSIC. A "SPONSORED LINKS" section is also visible.

view online at

http://www.coolhunting.com/archives/2005/11/liberty\_boots.php